20,000 Rich Acres Will Feel Life Touch

Phoenix, Ariz., September 26—Preliminary arrangements have been made for the building of a canal on the lower Gila river, with a heading about seven miles above Agua Caliente, which will irrigate between 15,000 and 20,000 acres of the richest land in Arizona, lying on the north side of that stream. The land is located partly in Maricopa and partly in Pima county.

The canal is to be built by the recently organized Palomas Highland Water Users' Association.

J. E. Nelson and W. P. McNealy, of this city are the two principal promoters of the project. Eastern capitalists are supplying financial backing. The names of these capitalists have not been made public, but they paid a visit to Phoenix and the lower Gila a short time ago.

It is estimated that it will cost not less than $250,000 to carry through the project as planned and place water upon the vast acres of fertile soil, that needs only water to make it as productive as any in the world.

The head of the canal is to be in solid rock about a mile below the South Gila head. The bed will be from eighteen inches to two feet below the bed of the river, therefore no dam will be necessary. Only a baffle, consisting of piles driven into the sand in order to pile sand up in the river bottom will be needed.

From the river the canal will extend out toward the mesa and thence westward. Along most of its length which will be twelve miles, it will be between five and six miles away from the Gila. At one point it will be only six miles from the Southern Pacific railroad.

It is expected that in the ordinary course of events enough water will flow into the river the keep the canal running full. But the promoters of the project are going to take no chances of drouth. A short distance below the head there will be a pumping plant, at a point where water is only a few feet below the surface.

This pump will be capable of lifting 60,000 gallons of water a minute. Whenever the water in the river falls, the pump will be started.

Gas will be used to furnish power for operating the pump. This gas will be generated from crude oil piped from Sentinel, twelve miles away in a straight line. This pipe line is one of the most extensive features of the project.
